"It has been five years since I was cured of heart trouble by your Heart Cure and Nervine, and I am just as sound as a dollar in that organ today. For several years I had been suffering with my heart. Breathing had become short and difficult at times, short, sharp pains about the heart, sometimes accompanied with fluttering would make me feel faint and languid. The least excitement or mental worry would almost unnerve me. I felt that the trouble was growing worse all the time, and after trying many remedies prescribed by physicians without obtaining relief, I was induced to give your remedies a trial. I was relieved the second day, and after taking three or four bottles all symptoms were removed and have never showed signs of returning."—REV. GEO. W. Kiracope, Chincoteague, Va.

Often in cases of heart trouble the stomach, kidneys, liver or lungs become affected. Then came the these combinations of capital, will Thanksgiving dinner. The table have a millionaire's train between this never reform the evils of which he makes very indefinite suggestion.

It is true, as he says, that "a fundamental base of civilization is the inviolability of property," but it is further true that the property which has been acquired through governmental favoritism, and by crushing out the life of competition, is noth ing better than stolen goods, and that the only adequate reform which could be wrought would be reparation. It has been only a little while since the President made the impression on the public mind that in his opinion the amendment of the Constitution would be required before the evils which he would now "cut out" could be reached. He believes now, however, that "monopolies, unjust discriminations which prevent or cripple competition, fraudulent over-capitalization, and trust organizations and practices, which injuriously affect inter-State power of the Congress 'to regulate now." commerce with foreign nations, and egulations and requirements operating directly upon such commerce, the instrumentalities thereof and those engaged therein."

But Congress must be very careful to pass a law "reasonable in its DO YOU GET UP provisions and effective in its operation." No law will be "reasonable" in the President's opinion, however which would affect the prosperity of the trusts, which have been built up under the fostering care of laws enacted in their interest. The combinations must be regulated, but we must be very careful how we regulate them. Capital must come under the control of reasonable legislation, but we must be very particular not to do anything which will cripple capital. Over-capitalization is great evil, but we must exercise special caution lest, in drawing off the water in which the rich combinations float, they touch bottom and bring much distress upon the "dear people," of course. The trusts have been mainly promoted by the tariff, but we must not meddle with the tariff, lest we fail to accomplish the cure of the trusts. What the President says upon this ubject, and indeed on the many other topics discussed in his message will be read with interest, we are sure, by the people. As a p'e sintgoing essay, the message compares more than favorably with Mr. Roosevelt's first message to Congress, and is certainly far more readable than the enormously long and very dull papers of most of his predecessors.—

The circus train had been in a wreck at Tifton earlier in the day when several of the animal cars were wrecked and two or 'three trained horses killed. Six miles out from that town Gypsy became so noisy and restless that O'Rourke entered her diately the mad brute attacked the man and crushed his life out against the sides of the car. O'Rourke, for some reason, did not close the door of the car after him, so after killing the keeper, Gypsy escaped to the woods. Her absence was noted before the train left the station and a hunt was organized. The big beast was shot a number of times before she succumbed to rifle bullets in the brain. O'Rourke's body was taken to Valdosta, where it was given a spectacular burial the same afternoon, being taken to the cemetery in a circus wagon drawn by six white horses. His home was in New Orleans, where he has a wife and family. The skin and bones of the elephant have been saved. Twelve men buried the mountain of flesh in the woods where Gypsy was killed.
